Common Law Admission Test (CLAT)

Introduction

The greatest contribution of National Law Schools has been to transform legal education into a professional education in its real sense of the term and to make it attractive to Indian intelligentsia. The success of National Law School of India University, Bangalore, has inspired many States to set up similar institutions in their respective territories and at present, there are eleven Law Schools in different parts of the country. These institutions are national in the sense that substantial number of seats in all these institutions are filled up by students from all over India and the academic staff are also recruited on all India basis. All of them conduct admission tests in different centres spread all over the country and thousands of students after their ten plus two examinations take these admission tests.

As the things stand now, each Law School conducts its own admission test and admits students as per its regulations. As a result, students aspiring for good legal education have to write a number of admission tests; and this multiplicity of admission tests has been causing tremendous hardship both physically and financially to the candidates taking these tests. This issue was raised from time to time by several people, but it drew national attention as a result of a Writ Petition filed by Mr. Varun Bhagat against the Union of India and various National Law Schools in the Supreme Court of India in 2006. In the course of hearing, the Honourable Chief Justice of India directed the Union of India to consult the National Law Schools with a view to evolving a scheme for common admission test. It may be noted that the Bar Council of India strongly supported this move towards common admission test.

Since all National Law Schools owe their existence to their respective State Legislation, there is no central agency to coordinate their activities. Therefore, a move such as common admission test requires the consensus of all National Law Schools participating in such a process. To facilitate such a consensus, the Ministry of Human Resources Development, the Government of India and the University Grants Commission of India convened the meeting of the Vice-Chancellors of seven National Law Schools namely NLSIU, NALSAR, NLIU, NUJS, NLU, HNLU and GNLU. The Chairman, Bar Council of India actively participated at these meetings. It may be noted that these seven Law Schools have been functioning for quite some time unlike other newly-established National Law Schools. After a couple of such meetings, these seven National Law Schools signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on 23rd November, 2007 committing themselves to hold the common admission test. It is quite in order to acknowledge the significant role played by Mr. Sunil Kumar, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Human Resources Development and Prof. Mool Chand Sharma, Vice-Chairman, University Grants Commission in this entire exercise.

According to this MoU, the Common Law Admission Test would be conducted hereafter every year by each of National Law Schools on rotation as per the criterion of seniority. The NLSIU, Bangalore, the oldest of the National Law Schools will set the process in motion by undertaking to conduct the admission test for the academic year 2008-09.

It is expected that other National Law Schools (i.e., the Law Schools established by State enactments) would join these seven Law Schools in due course.

It has been our experience that larger the catchment area, better will be the quality of students; and it would be better for the institutions and the society. This should be the first step to improve the quality of our educational institutions, so that they may measure upto the international standards. This is imperative, if we have to successfully meet the challenges of globalization.

The following National Law Universities will be making use of Common Law Admission Test scores for their respective admissions for the academic year 2008-09:

National Law Schools

It is somewhat paradoxical that the legal education had not received the adequate attention from our policy makers in the early years of our Independence despite the fact that most of them were eminent lawyers. Naturally there was heavy emphasis on technical education in view of the need for industrializing our economy. But the important role assigned to law and the judiciary in our system of constitutional governance required sound legal education as well. The relative negligence of legal education took a heavy toll on the system; and the concept of national law school was a response to meet the challenges posed by the deteriorating standards.

The Bar Council of India, representing the organized legal profession at all India level, took initiative in establishing the first National Law School of the country. This bold experiment required statutorily-guaranteed autonomy from the conventional university system. Hence there was a need for the establishment of a full-fledged law university. The Government of Karnataka, under the visionary leadership of the then Chief Minister, Sri. Ramakrishna Hegde, responded to the request of Bar Council of India by passing the National Law School of India Act, 1986. The State Government also provided the land and the substantial financial assistance in the initial stages. The Law School became functional in 1988. From the very beginning, it admitted students on the basis of all India admission test.

The decade of nineties was the era of globalization and it opened up vast opportunities for young law graduates. As a result, the products of National Law School have been very much in demand everywhere. This phenomenon inspired other State Governments to set up similar law schools in their own States. As a result, a number of National Law Schools have come up in different parts of the country. Statutory basis provided by the State Legislature concerned and intake on all India basis are the common characteristics of all these Law Schools. Of course, all of these Law Schools had close links with the higher judiciary. Invariably, either the Chief Justice of India or the Chief Justice of the respective High Court happens to be the Chancellor of these Law Schools.

Broadly speaking, the objectives of all these National Law Schools may be summarized as follows:

- to achieve excellence in legal education and in this process, benchmark themselves against the international standards.
- to impart comprehensive legal education relevant to the requirements of our country.

- to advance knowledge by promoting inter-disciplinary research in all branches of law.
 - to inculcate noble professional and ethical values so as to realize the objectives enshrined in our Constitution.

In keeping with the present trend, all National Law Schools are expected to be self-financing, and therefore, they charge relatively higher tuition fees. But it has been the common objective of all of them that no student is compelled to discontinue the study on account of financial constraints. Hence, all of them provide liberal means cum merit scholarships.

All National Law Schools are residential and the students are expected to be in the campus so that the teaching and learning would be a continuous process.

With these words of introduction, the Common Law Admission Committee welcomes the young students from all over India and abroad to come and study in National Law Schools. In order to facilitate the selection, brief sketches of the academic programmes offered by each of the Law Schools are provided herewith. For further details, one may access the website of the Law School concerned or go through the bulletins of the individual law schools.

B.A., LL.B. (Hons.): Five Year Integrated Course

National Law School of India University, (NLSIU) Bangalore is the first Indian Law University established by a statute passed by Karnataka Legislature in 1986. It became functional in 1988. It is the only Law School sponsored by the Bar Council of India with a view to raising the standard of legal education in India. Leading lawyers, judges and academicians have been associating with the Law School from the very beginning and in this way, the NLSIU represents the unique partnership among the Bar, the Bench and the Academia.

NLSIU, Bangalore offers five year B.A., LL.B.(Hons.) programme whereunder four social science subjects, namely, History, Economics, Political Science and Sociology are integrated with legal studies. The social science subjects are taught in the first two years along with law subjects. All the subjects are compulsory in the first four years; and in the fifth year, optional seminar courses are offered along with a few compulsory courses.

The NLSIU follows a trimester system whereunder the academic year is divided into three parts and four subjects are taught in each trimester. As a result, a student would have studied sixty subjects when he/she completes the five year term. The wide spread of subjects helps a student to acquire extensive and intensive knowledge of the legal system.

The optional seminar courses offered in the fifth year provide opportunities to specialize in certain areas. For example, a student who wishes to pursue career in corporate law may choose seminar courses on accountancy, securities, mergers and acquisitions, etc. The NLSIU encourages the involvement of outside expertise in offering optional seminar courses. In the recent times, the seminar courses have been offered in subjects such as International Taxation, Accountancy and Financial Management, Information Technology Law, Telecommunication Law, European Community Law, Competition Law, Anti-Dumping Law, Negotiation Skills, Law of Elections, Refugee & Humanitarians Laws, Affirmative Action, Women and the Law, Displaced and the Law etc.

Another significant method of involving scholars from outside is by way of one credit courses. These courses comprise of nearly eighteen lecture hours normally spread over a week. The school invites experts, national and international, to come and stay within the campus for a week to deliver these lectures. Any interested student can sign up for these courses provided he/she possesses some basic understanding of the subject. Some of the one credit courses offered in recent times are: Shipping Laws, Law and Literature, South African Constitutional Law, the U.S. Patent Laws, Genetic Resources Policy etc.

The NLSIU is a fully residential University with a number of halls of residence for men and women. Men and women have separate mess facilities. Shri. Narayana Rao Melgiri National Law Library, well-equipped with books, journals and electronic data bases is the heart of the campus both in literal and metaphorical sense of the term. The academic block, hostels and the Library are provided with wireless connectivity so that the students may access internet facilities through their laptops.

Having realized the importance of computers in education, the NLSIU expects every student to possess a laptop. Those who cannot make down payments to buy laptops may go for bank-loans and the Law School stands guarantee for the repayment of such loans.

The NLSIU is proud of its vibrant student community which has excelled in curricular, co-curricular and extra-curricular activities. The Law School has a well-equipped moot-court hall named after Honourable Justice Hidayatullah. The students have done very well in national and international moot court competitions. The moot and debating competitions hosted by NLSIU have attracted participants from all over India and from neighbouring countries such as Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nepal, Malaysia, etc. The Law School students have in the recent times organized sports and theatre festivals and national and international teams have participated in those events.

There is a rigorous internship programme which every student of NLSIU has to undergo as part of the curriculum and it starts from III year onwards. During these internships, a student has to compulsorily work with lawyers doing trial work and appellate work. The students who do very well can expect to work as law clerks with the Judges of the Supreme Court and High Courts.

The NLSIU has well-developed research centres in areas such as Juvenile Justice, Intellectual Property Rights and Environmental Law. The interested students can associate themselves with these centres.

The Law School also has a well-equipped International Training Centre wherein seminars and workshops are conducted on a regular basis.

B.A.,LL.B.(Hons.): Five Year Integrated Course

The NALSAR University of Law was established under the Andhra Pradesh Act 34 of 1998. It is a fully residential university equipped with state of the art facilities. It is the second National Law University established after NLSIU, Bangalore.

The NALSAR offers a five year integrated B.A.,LL.B.(Hons.) programme. English, History, Economics, Political Science and Sociology are taught as social science components of legal studies. In the final year, two seminar courses are offered. The students can choose courses from such diverse areas as Public Laws and Policy Choice, Family Laws, Business Laws, International Laws etc.

With a view to developing professional skills, NALSAR imparts instruction in simulated settings such as moot courts and drama. Its curriculum is based on UGC Curriculum Development Committee Report. Clinical education is an integral component of the course curriculum.

In NALSAR, the instruction is given through lectures, seminars, group and individual tutorials. Collaborative teaching is encouraged to maximize on available expertise and to promote inter-disciplinary understanding. The NALSAR, as far as possible, encourages individuated, one-to-one interaction. Each student has a faculty advisor, who acts as a counselor for curricular, co-curricular and extra-curricular activities.

As a residential university, the NALSAR has adequate accommodation for all its students. Altogether, there are eight halls of residence with a common dining hall-cum-kitchen. There is a separate library building with large number of books, journals and electronic data bases. The entire campus is Wi-fi enabled. The University has an excellent moot court hall and state of the art video conferencing facility. This video conferencing facility can bring the lectures from anywhere in the world alive to the audience in NALSAR and this will go a long way in augmenting the faculty resources of NALSAR. In addition, the NALSAR has excellent conference halls wherein the seminars and workshops are regularly held.

The NALSAR has a rigorous research programme. N.C. Banerjee Centre for IPR studies and S.P. Chatterjee Centre for Environmental Studies have facilitated the research in respective areas both by the faculty and students. The University has published a number of text books, research studies and monographs over a period of time.

M.K. Nambyar SAARC Law Centre for Advanced Legal Studies is the most recent addition to the research facilities. This Centre seeks to promote Comparative South Asian Constitutional Studies.

B.A., LL.B. (Hons.), B.Sc., LL.B.(Hons.) Programme

The West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences (NUJS) was established under the WBNUJS Act 1999 (West Bengal Act IX of 1999). It is a university within the meaning of subsection (f) of Section 2 and approved under Section 12 B for receiving grants under the UGC Act 1956. It has been granted permanent affiliation of the Bar Council of India. The Hon'ble Chief Justice of India is the Chancellor of NUJS and is also the Chairman of its highest governing body, the General Council.

NUJS strives to pursue holistic legal education in order to prepare its graduates for the diverse worlds of litigation, corporate legal practices, academia and legal research. Due emphasis is given to clinical legal education in order to equip the students with knowledge, skill and values to promote the ends of justice through the instrument of law.

NUJS offers five-year integrated B.A. / B.Sc. LL.B (Hons.) and two-year LL.M programmes besides M.Phil, Ph.D and LL.D programmes in law. It follows semester system and its students are exposed to a carefully articulated blend of law and social science courses. It adopts Socratic Method of teaching of well-structured and regularly updated curricula with a host of optional courses to cater to the needs of appropriate specialization. In addition to writing end-semester examinations, each student has to compulsorily prepare project papers on select topics pertaining to each subject of study. A very rigorous system of evaluation is in place. Grading is done on an eight-point scale.

NUJS has an excellent faculty, a good balance of the experienced and the young. They work with the self-belief that NUJS is poised to become the premier law school in this part of the globe and their pupil are among the best in the world of legal education. To augment their efforts, NUJS has entered into memorandum of agreements with a number of premier institutions of international repute to gain academic inputs of outstanding teachers as guest faculty on a sustainable basis.

The University is located on a prime land at the Salt Lake City of Kolkata, overseeing the Eastern Metropolitan Bypass. The campus has an academic and three residential blocks, two seven storied halls of residence for women and men each and a two-storied staff accommodation cum Guest House. The academic block, named after Dr. B.R. Ambedkar, is a four-storied majestic edifice in stone, having 105 rooms in all. It is an inward looking building, octagonal in shape, and rounded by wide-spread verandas that open up to a vast central lush green courtyard. It has everything a modern university ought to have - a host of class rooms, seminar halls, conference rooms, a well-stocked air-conditioned library open from 8 A.M. through 10 P.M. with services of internet, printing and photocopying. Physical infrastructure of NUJS also includes on campus Bank, a canteen, state-of-the-art kitchens at the hostels, health care and sports and recreational facilities. Students of NUJS have adapted themselves to computer aided education in a big way and LAN service is extended to most of the rooms in the hostels. Construction of a modern auditorium and complete networking of the entire campus is now underway.

Students of NUJS are a promising lot and are carefully nurtured for all round excellence. They have enviable track-records in the field of mooting and debating, have regular publications in peer-reviewed journals of international repute and are known for their outreach community services and legal aid activities. They have the unique distinction of publishing regularly two journals, one quarterly and other annual, featuring contemporary legal thought. It is no wonder that each one of all three passed-out batches has been satisfactorily placed in the profession and is able to make a mark in her/his respective vocation.

Despite being able to achieve a high level of academic ambience, the NUJS has maintained a relatively modest fee structure. It further seeks to ensure that no student is forced to discontinue studies on account of financial constraints. With generous donations of individuals and institutions, the University has built up Scholarship Fund, proceeds of which are disbursed to students every year on need basis. The alumni of the NUJS have also instituted a scholarship from this year. Arrangements are in place for students of NUJS to secure educational loans from any Bank of their choice on mutually agreeable terms. The Indian Bank has announced special package for the NUJS students to facilitate speedy sanction of loan at softer rate of interest without any collateral.

NUJS perceives legal education as an efficient instrument of improved social order contributing to national development. Globalised environment has thrown new challenges and is opening up newer issues of concern. It expects the students to adequately arm themselves to combat these challenges in a mission mode. The standards set in NUJS are already very high. Those who join NUJS are expected not only to sustain, but also to improve upon these standards. NUJS promises best return of their dedication, hard-labour and committed efforts.

B.A. LL.B.(Hons.) Programme

Hidayatullah National Law University (HNLU) has been established by the Government of Chhattisgarh under the Hidayatullah National Law University of Chhattisgarh Act, 2003. The University became functional immediately thereafter. From its modest beginning, the HNLU has been making rapid strides to become Unus Unorum and a Centre of Excellence in Legal Education.

The new campus of HNLU is located at Village Uperwara off National Highway connecting Raipur and Vishakhapatnam and is about 22 kms. from the city campus. The new campus is constructed with huge investment of about 50.00 Crores sprawling over 65 acres of land abutting a beautiful lake. It consists of the academic and administration block, halls of residence for men/women, halls of residence for girls, separate Dining Halls attached to the hostels, Faculty Quarters, Guest House, Gymnasium, Sports Complex and a proposed training centre. The entire campus is located in a serene and pollution-free environment, surrounded by natural resources. Plenty of open space makes the campus a refreshing one. The academic block consists of three-storied library with air-conditioned reading hall and a fully air-conditioned internet centre housing about 150 computers. The academic block also houses the State-of-the-art Moot Court Halls carefully designed to match the standards of the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India and the High Courts. HNLU is the only National Law University in India having a hi-tech Language Lab to equip students with writing skills and communication skills required for a promising career in law. The Language Lab is having computers fully loaded with interactive language learning programs. The entire campus is Wi-Fi enabled. All classrooms are air-conditioned with Hi-Tech gadgets having DLP projectors, interactive boards etc. The campus also consists of the State-of-the-art Conference Hall, which can accommodate about 450 persons. The academic block also has an aesthetically designed amphitheatre to cater to the needs of the students. The library is the hub of all academic activities established to accomplish the research and academic activities of the University. Our library is also a depository of rare books donated by Justice M. Hidayatullah, which constitutes an important section for us and is rather enviable for other law libraries. HNLU periodically publishes "Journal of Law and Social Policy" and "Student Law Journal".

The Honours Paper System

The Honours course of the University is its distinguishing feature from other National Law Schools of the country as it offers the student to specialize in two subject areas of his/her choice. The Honours course differentiates itself from the Honours paper system, wherein a student opting for a stream, is enriched with intensive knowledge through three exhaustive papers. The teaching in honours paper is highly interactive due to choice-based study of the subject. The course is designed with a near resemblance to a postgraduate course in a particular subject. Coupled with the compulsory papers as prescribed by the University, the Honours course provides a comprehensive five-paper study in the chosen subject, on completion of the exercise.
